Congress met and voted the measures necessary to provide it with cash. The absurd delusion which has so generally prevailed that $100,000,000 of its stock of gold had been by act of Congress put into a fund where it could not be used, has also been dissipated.

This whole matter of setting up this $100, worshipped without ever being put to use, and

To provide for the refunding of the bonds of the United States which matured and became payable in 1881, a bill was introduced in the House of Representatives in December, 1880 authorizing an issue of new bonds bearing interest at 3 per cent, per annum and redeema-ble five years and payable ten years from their date. One section of the bill also made the bonds the only ones which, after a future day specified, should be accepted from national banks as a basis of circulation. The bill was flercely contested in the House, one point of dispute being the rate of interest, which many thought should be 3% per cent. per annum instead of 3 per cent., in order to insure the success of the loan, and another being the section limiting the national banks to the deposit of these bonds, exclusively, as security for their circulating notes. Finally it was passed and sent to the Senate. There the controversy over the rate of interest and the bank section was renewed and carried on vigorously for a long while, but on Feb. 18, 1881, the Senate adopted the bill with a few slight amendments and returned it to the House for concurrence.

During all this time the bill had attracted no special attention and excited no alarm, and the prospect was good that it would quietly become a law. For a few days, even, after it had passed the Senate and gone back to the House, the same calm in regard to it prevailed.

Suddenly a little country bank president took it into his head that the bill, if it became a law.

would compel the national banks to surrender at once their 4 and 4% per cent bonds deposited as security for circulation and accept the proposed new 3 per cents in their place. He communicated his fears to other bank presidents, the panic among them spread, and on

The other houses also received their share of the crowd. The monkey house was a pushing mass of humanity, so closely packed that those inside couldnot get out again, and those about the door pushed and clawed each other in a vain attempt to catch a sight of the cages. About every fifteen minutes a herd of ragged urchins would come tearing out of one of the animal houses pursued by a big policeman. Then the younsters would make their way into another house, only to have the scene repeated there.

It will be two months yet before the animals will be placed in their out-door quarters.

the act was to be in silver as well as gold, and it involved the cancellation and retirement of the legal tenders, partly by destroying them as they were paid in for taxes and dues prior to Jan. 1, 1879, and partly by paying coin for them after that date. They are beginning to remember. what they ought never to have forgotten, that the United States is not on the verge of bankbe sold, but the act of May 31, 1878, by directing the reissue of the redeemed legal ruptcy, and that with over $100,000,000 in gold tenders, rendered the redemption authorized in its Treasury it is able to meet all of its obby the act of 1875 impossible. Redemption, as ligations likely to be presented legal tender and silver bullion notes included. Even if it now made, is quite another thing from the redemption intended by the Resumption act, actually possessed not a dollar either of gold or of silver, its credit would remain intact, and and the provisions of that act do not, on their would enable it to carry on its business until

The most discouraging feature of the financial outlook, at present, is not, however, so much the danger of an immediate suspension of gold payments resulting from the operation of the Sherman act, as the nearly assured certainty that the act will not be repealed during the life of the present Congress, and must, therefore, bring about suspension eventually. The Senate is, beyond question, more strongly in favor of silver than it was prior to March 4. and, Mr. Harrity's canvass of the House must have shown so great a preponderance of silver men as to put the calling of an extra session to repeal the Sherman act out of the question. For the next two years, therefore, and perhaps longer, we shall continue to drag on, see ing our gold currency slowly displaced by paper and sinking gradually to the silver level. MATTHEW MARSHALL anybody else could explain. All they could say was that they wanted to get hold of their This withdrawal of legal tenders from circulation and the locking of them up in the Treasury compelled the banks of this city to curtail their loans, and this again alarmed borrowers, and set them to slaughtering their stocks. The result was that on Feb. 24 and Feb. 25 the wildest sort of excitement pre-vailed on the New York Stock Exchange. Money went up to 1 per cent a day. The sales of stocks were, for that time, enormous, amounting on one of the days mentioned to 625,000 shares, and prices falling in some cases 10 points and more. Thus, between Feb. 21 and Feb. 25, Canada Southern dropped from 85 to 72, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy from 171 to 140, Hannibal and St. Joseph preferred from 105 to 94, Lake Shore from 129 to 120, New York Central from 148 to 140, Chicago and Northwestern from 130 to 118, Reading from 72 to 56. Union Pacific from 120 to 108, and Western Union Telegraph from 110 to 101, corresponding declines taking place in the other stocks traded in at that time. All this mischief was caused by paying into the cause the Secretary of the Treasury came to six months the same bank presidents, who were ready to throw the financial world into their matured bonds at 3% per cent interest leaving the principle payable at the pleasure of the Government, and a year later their clerks were standing in line at the Post Offices all over the country to secure the first of a new issue of bonds bearing 3 per cent. interest and payable at the Government's pleasure. It will be observed that in 1881, as on the present occasion, if the men who control the national banks had taken the pains to inform themselves of the facts of the case by personal inquiry, instead of accepting as gospel the erroneous misconception of an ignorant leader, they might have spared themselves and the community a great deal of loss and anxiety. The Funding bill of 1881 contained no such provision as it was almost universally believed to contain, and yet hundreds of bank presidents, without examining it themselves. went ahead and scrambled for the rescue of their bonds as if the safety of their institu-tions depended on it. In like manner it has been repeated on all sides for the past four weeks that the law required the Treasury to keep $100,000,000 of its gold intact at all hazards, and that as soon as its stock of the metal ran down to that limit it must either suspend gold payments or sell bonds for gold to replenish its supply. The curious thing is, that while nobody could point to any act of Congress establishing the supposed $100,000,000 gold limit, everybody asserted there was such an act, because some-body else had once said there was. Not one of my business friends whom I attempted to enlighten on the subject, had ever seen the act, and yet every one of them insisted that I must be mistaken in denying its existence, because so many of their friends believed it. At last an opinion which Soliciton Aldrich had given to President Harrison was made public, and, I hope, has settled the question. Mr. Aldrich declares explicitly what I have been saying for weeks, that

So it was decided not to attempt to deliver the despatch.

Lord Charles Beresford, is now high in the service. This was during the war of the rebellion, when England was rather unfriendly to the United States, and many Englishmen were inclined to think that the United States Government was of no special consequence, and

One night Lord Charles Beresford and his friend, in order to show their contempt for the United States Government, went to the American Legation, tore down Dr. McBride's cont of arms, and hired a native to row them with It into the bay where their ship was anchored.

On learning next morning that the coat of arms was missing, the American Minister instituted a search, and soon found the native who had taken it to the ship. A search warrant was procured and the coat of arms brought back by an officer. The commandant of the man-of-war and the English Minister at Honolulu immediately called on the American Minister and offered an apology in the name of their Government for the insult which had been offered. After having made their apology, they stated that they supposed this was satisfactory, and that they had atoned for the offence. The American Minister informed them that this was not satisfactory, that these two young lords, who were officers of the British Government, had not only committed a theft, but had, by their act, insulted the Government represented by him. He further said that, having taken down the coat of arms with their own hands, he would not be satisfied until they themselves put it back where they got it. At this the English of the prisoners.

Besides roubing Biehusen, the police, as they think, have traced three other rouberies to the quartet. Frederick J. Stachler, a butcher of 52 Havemeyer street; Morris Kobke, a grocer of 87 Grand street, and Hon Kan, a laundryman at South First street and Marcy avenue, will be in courtio-day to make charges against the four. They were all robbed in the last two weeks.

of the two young men while in the act of nating the coat of arms to the archway over the entrance to the American Legation. On the left hand side of the picture, as the reader views it, are standing from right to left the English Minister facing the gare, and the American Minister facing the gare, and the American Minister facing the gare, and the American Minister, with a silk hat on, facing from the gate and talking to the commandant of the English man-of-war beside him.

After the coat of arms had been replaced the two young men came to the American Minister and apologized for their conduct, saying that they did not stop to think what an insult they were offering to the American Government. This ended the matter in the islands.

The American Minister then reported all the facts to Secretary Seward. The latter demanded an apology from the English Government, which was made. The two young men were called home and were dismissed from the English navy for the years. Lord Charles Beresford has since won distinction in the English navy. He commanded the landing force at Alexandria in 1882.

Another incident relating to this affair may be worth mentioning: The King of the Sandwich Islands and let it be known that he was rersonally displeased because the American Minister compelled the Englishmen to restore his cont of arms. A few weeks after this, when the American Minister went to the Palace to make his usual official visit, the King, evidently with the design of insulting him, sent word that he was there as a representative of his Government and intended to stay until hedd see him. The Minister again sent word that he was there as a representative of his Government and intended to stay until hedd see him. The King then appeared, but in a very nervous and excited state; but no reference was made to any differences, and the interview passed off pieasantly, and their relations continued thereafter agreeable.

Rosolutions were passed calling upon the Board to rescind its action, and providing for an appeal to Mayor Gilroy in case the Board should refuse.
